

The Fox on the Fairway

Show Wows Audience

1. Junior Jack Ossenkop's character falls down in dramatic fashion. Photo by Maddie Naeve
2. Senior Quinnie Rodman and junior Jack Ossenkop act out a scene fighting over a vase. Photo by Maddie Naeve.
3. CAST: Front Row: Quinnie Rodman, Sam White, Tyler Fall. Back Row: David Wolfe, Grace Krapfl, Maddy Steen, Jack Ossenkop, and Jeremy Ferguson.

TRIM LINE TRIM LINE

TRIM LINE TRIM LINE

I wouldn't do that if I were you!

Senior David Wolf takes aim to tee off using Maddy Steen as his tee. Photo by Maddie Naeve.

Above: Seniors David Wolfe, Quinnie Rodman, and Maddy Steen converse about their characters' involvement in the upcoming golf tournament to save the golf club. Photo by Maddie Naeve.
Left: Jeremy Furgeson's character brags about his successes as a golfer in the competitive industry.

Above: Junior Jack Ossenkop's character is led in meditation by senior David Wolfe.
Right: Seniors Grace Krapfl and Jeremy Furgeson's characters get into an argument on stage. Photo by Maddie Naeve

Comedic Farce Thrills Crowd

By Jillian McGuire

"The Fox on the Fairway," a comedy by Ken Ludwig, concerns what really occurs at a private country club in a light-hearted and comedic way.

"My favorite memory for the play besides getting to hang out with the cast all the time was opening night when the first joke launched and you could hear laughter in the audience," said junior Jack Ossenkop. "It was much easier to get into the groove and have fun knowing the audience was also enjoying the show."

Ossenkop played the role of Justin Hicks who is a recently hired employee at Quail Valley Country Club in the play.

"My favorite part of being involved in 'The Fox on the Fairway' was being a part of such a close-knit cast," said Senior Grace Krapfl. Everyone seemed very hardworking, and supportive," she said.

Krapfl played Muriel Bingham in the production. She owns the antique shop that becomes part of the bet made.

The play was directed by Tom Stephens and was performed on Oct. 27 and Nov. 3.

Layout by Jillian McGuire and Maddie Naeve 47