The 2019 Trojan Epic marks the 19th and final yearbook I've advised at West. It has been a delightful journey, filled with fun and hard work. Try mixing the energy of high school students with the stress of deadlines, the pull of photography, the energy of color, the tug of design. Who wouldn't love this job? A generation has passed before my eyes. Back in 2000, Walter Van Heel was a student in my first Intro to Yearbook class. Today, he is the father of twins and works as a member of our custodial staff. The "back room" where we produce our book started out with three computers and film. (See Wikipedia if you don't know what film is.) Today, that room holds 16 Macs, and its walls have been painted three or four times, whenever the mood struck. The editors call it their second home. Some weeks, it's my first home—especially deadline weeks. The students who found their passion in yearbook are what made the publication strong and the production process gratifying. This year's group — Sidney, Peyton, Jack, Krishna, Ellie, Abdul, Nicole — brought the same commitment and energy that past staffs did. Although the 40th anniversary (Maggie & Caitlyn) and the 50th anniversary (Julia & Allie) were special years, so was 2012 (Tessa), when we were reaching out to one another after Caroline Found's death. My daughters, Nina and Ali, were part of the 2002 and 2007 staffs, so those books were special. But I probably had the most fun with the 2003 group. Laughter was their middle name. So many students have collaborated and connected with each other. And with me. From Phases to Random By Design. From C'est La Vie to Hoopla. From Bring the Noise to Go Bold. From All in One Place to Generation West. These students created a theme and captured each year with originality and style. I can't think of a better use for a journalism degree than to guide high school students in the production of a book that many students will cherish forever. I know I will.
