"A lot has changed," said Nakeesha Kipper, a former North Wildcat, who graduated in 1997. "I love that the music kids can perform in the new auditorium instead of the gym. When I attended North, my locker wasn't blue; it was gold. It isn't even here anymore. I'd say the biggest changes would have to be the auditorium, and the cafeteria."

From the air in 1985, the campus was small; but in the fall of 2002, noticeable additions took shape with the new large gym, a performing arts center, and a connection to the YMCA as a partnership for the pool.

2019

Not quite complete at the end of October, the new blue field house serves as a background for the first block Wildcat Marching Band practice on one of the sports fields. "This building will be multipurpose. A variety of athletic teams will be able to use it all year round. It will help our athletes become better, no question. Very fortunate to have this new facility and can't wait to see our athletes in there improving," said Athletic Director Jeremy Mosier.

To bring life to the large, new sign for cafeteria expectations, four students prepare to enjoy their meals keeping in mind the requirements as they eat before the performance at Metro Fest.

Pointing out time changes, for early out Wednesday schedule, sophomore Cashea Kipper refreshes her memory that the blocks two and three are reversed, so lunch time can be reasonable.

With excited energy, MVP mentors senior Haley Haussmann and junior MiMe Tyson greet a freshman PAWS group to present their purpose and to share concerns about the violence in teens' lives.

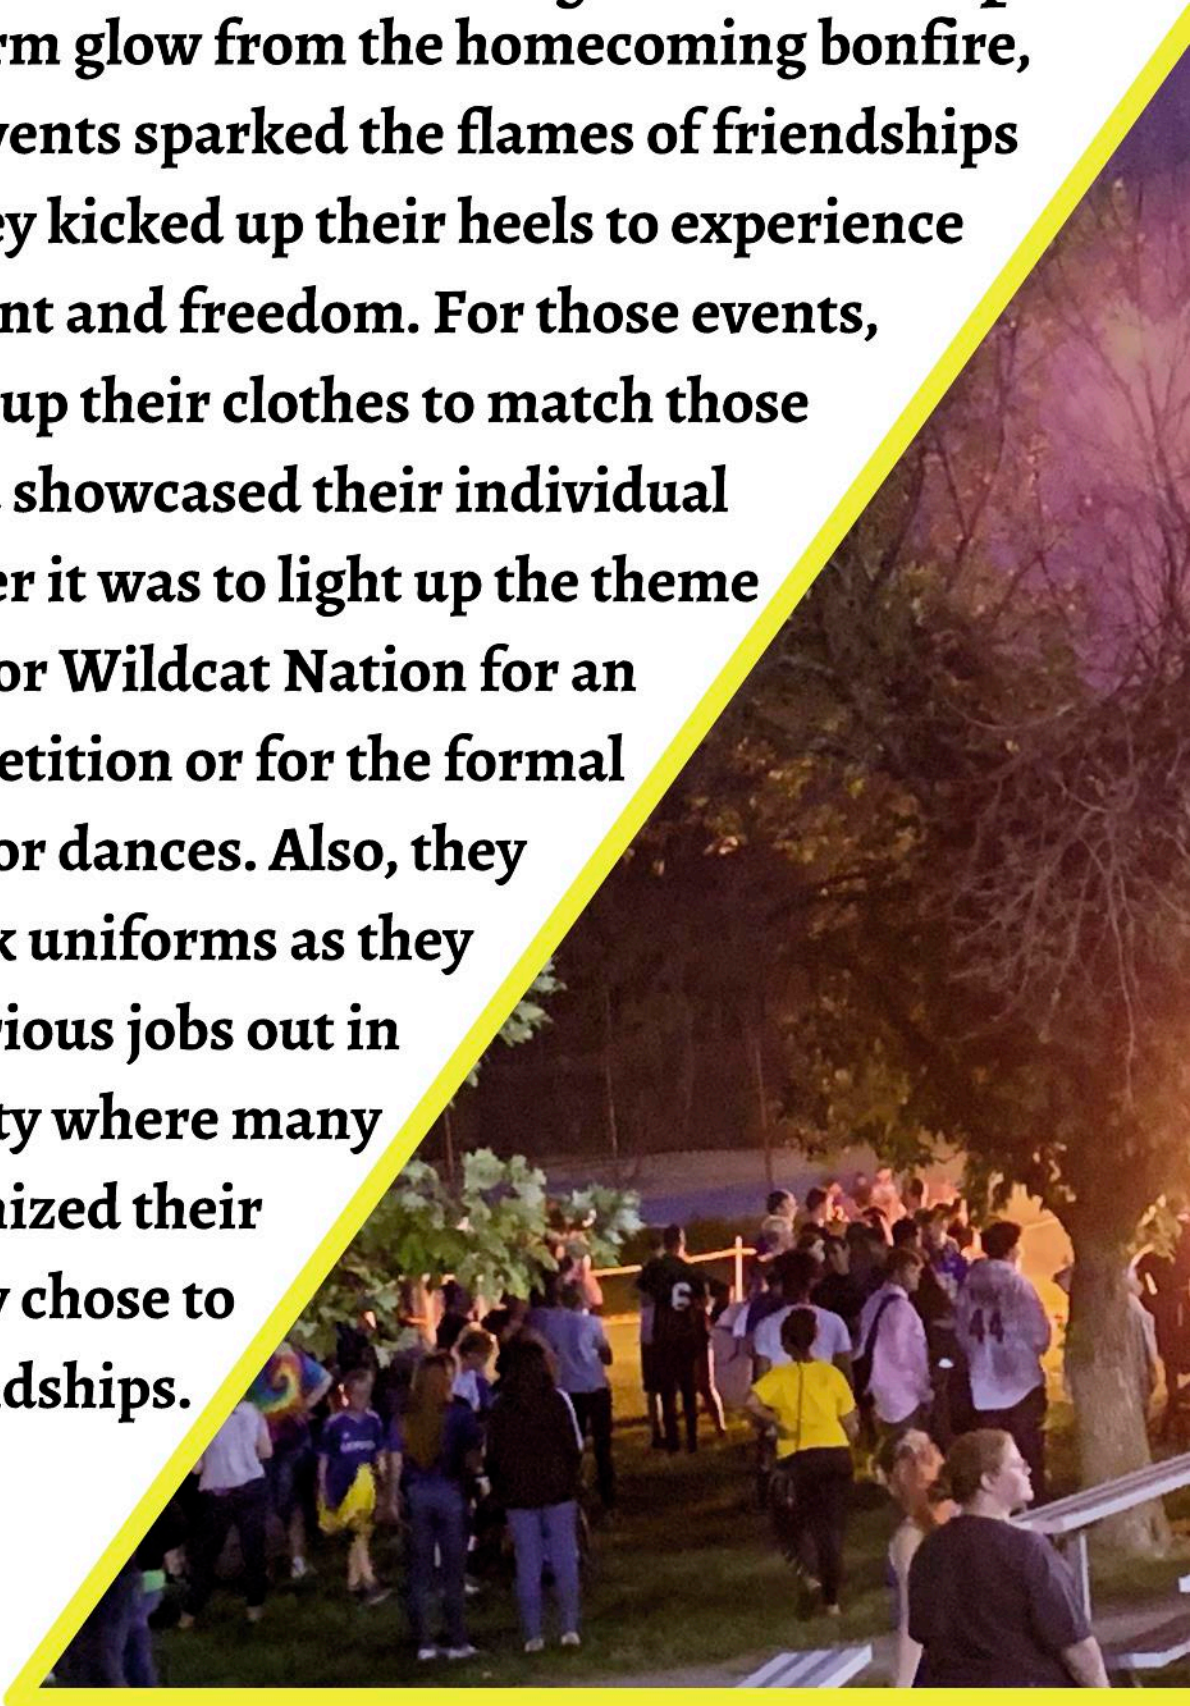

On his way for another Wildcat TD, senior Trevor Collins heads for the end zone as he outruns the Davenport Central Blue Devils to lead the way to anchoring City Champs Title with a 37-0 explosion.

With 2020 vision,
the Home of the Wildcats focused on both external and internal additions to the campus. At the top of the hill next to the softball diamond, a new athletic complex caught students' and staff's eyes. On the inside, huge plaques reminded students and staff of PAWS expectations in multiple areas of the main building as the PBIS team focused on its mission. Within the PAWS curriculum, MVP - trained students met with students monthly to bring awareness and strategies to them about issues of violence and methods to handle them in their lives. Also, one-hour-early-out Wednesdays returned into the schedule along with RT I sessions changed to being held between first and second blocks. Likewise, varsity

STUDENT LIFE

Focus on the friendships

Like the warm glow from the homecoming bonfire, student life events sparked the flames of friendships and fun as they kicked up their heels to experience that excitement and freedom. For those events, they changed up their clothes to match those moments and showcased their individual styles, whether it was to light up the theme in bleachers for Wildcat Nation for an athletic competition or for the formal attire for major dances. Also, they modeled work uniforms as they worked in various jobs out in the community where many people recognized their efforts as they chose to focus on friendships.

After the crowning of the Homecoming King and Queen, seniors Jacob Hansen and Anne Awour, students and guests gather around the blazing bonfire which changed its traditional location to an area closer to the baseball field and the tennis courts due to the newly-constructed field house. "I thought it was really fun! As a freshman, I felt like being welcomed into a new family when they burned the Davenport West Falcon logo," said freshman Jay Altman.

Thumb-up approval goes out to the team and the crowd from Mascot Victor E. Wildcat, freshman Jalyn "Jay" Altman, as a night of hoops begins for the Wildcats as they "Defend the Den" for a girls' home basketball game. "It all began when I was sitting in class and heard the announcement and thought how I would never do that. Then I heard it two more weeks in a row and decided that I wanted to step out of my comfort zone and be Victor E. Wildcat. I'm proud that I actually decided to do it because I'm usually such an introvert," said Altman.
