

"We showed up for the players working the hardest."
-Matthew Brewster '20

Pictured above is our Frontline with one of PV's foreign exchange students, Juanes Carrillo (fourth from the left), who graduated last year. Juanes came back to the stands for one last homecoming game.

CAN'T STOP, WON'T STOP

Front line and Friday Night lights

The picks for frontline members are made the year before their season by the past senior leaders before they graduate. They question potential students to see if they are good role models for the underclassmen.

The students chosen for this have caused the levels of passion and spirit in the stands go above and beyond this year while still respecting the opponents. These seniors are some of the most kind and determined in supporting their fellow athletes.

Having seniors on frontline is important for the underclassmen and sets an example for them to look up to. With this group of people to follow throughout the season, there is a sense of excitement and expectation set for fans

As tradition goes, the decision for which seniors will be on frontline in 2020 is still being made. One current member involved in this decision, Nate Martell, explains the different components that go into deciding Frontline:

"There are many important qualities to hold as a frontline member, most importantly school spirit and positivity along with being loud and proud. It is absolutely key that a member is a good role model for underclassmen. Those younger kids will observe the qualities held by seniors on frontline and will mimic it to be able to keep the great tradition of frontline for years to come."

If we have admirable frontline role models for the underclassmen then frontline can expect the participants to be important positions for our school representation.

Every member has certain characteristics to be on frontline and will establish themselves in leading our fans. They have all kept the most important thing in mind: their duty as role models will come before any bad sportsmanship or any extreme passion against the other team.

In order to have a more promising athletic season, good school representation is needed to hold up PV's "Committed to Excellence" ideal.

This standard is upheld and will continue to be upheld by frontline.

"Being a Frontline leader was defiantly one of my favorite high school memories. I've made so many friendships that will last a life time and supporting our Spartans was always so fun!" - Belle Bormann '20 (pictured left)

"Frontline creates a super fun environment and it's important for there to be a frontline for the underclassmen to follow and get immersed in the game." - Olivia Schilling '20

"I enjoyed getting to cheer on my best friends, with my best friends. It's something special to have before we all leave each other. We made the most of it each week, win or lose." - Andrew Doyle '20 (pictured center)

Customer is allowed to have objects outside of the margin.

TRIM LINE

TRIM LINE