

Veterans Day

“My dad and other male family members have served in the Army. It’s a hard life because every three years my dad gets deployed overseas for a couple of months. He is also gone for about half of each month for training.”

“My dad served in the Air Force. I’ve had relatives in the armed forces my entire life, as it runs in my family, so it has always been a constant for me. It’s now something I’m looking into pursuing in the future.”

Xavier’s Veterans Day

The Xavier Student Senate prepared a prayer service in honor of the veterans in the Xavier community on November 11.

Military families were invited to join the students as Fr. Mark Murphy from St. Jude’s, a veteran himself, presided during the prayer service. The school was able to witness a procession of the flags, the veterans in attendance being blessed and the overwhelming feeling of reverence as the students applauded them for their service. Throughout the day, Xavier witnessed the significance of service for one’s country and reverence towards the flag.

“My dad is currently serving in the National Guard. He is in a really good position because he only serves one weekend a month, so he’s not away very often. His role provides a lot of benefits for our family.”
