

▲ Aaron Cleppe, Chad Gorgen, and Dylan Bourgeois, all '18, work together to spread mulch around the trunk of tree at Sugarbottom.

▶ Chloe Rice, '18, takes off at the starting line of the four by eight, placing her relay team ahead of the other schools.

"I won my event at districts, which was the 3000, which is a little less than two miles. I beat my own school record of 10:53 and ran a 10:44. It made me feel a lot more confident going into state" -Madison Bach, '16

▲ Holli Jones, '16, wrestles the ball away from her Central City Sabers opponent while trying to gain control and score a goal for her team during a girls' varsity soccer game at home.

Mulching

Andrew Griffith, '15, Richelle Brunner, Jasmine Bertram, and Shelby Brewer, all '16, work as a team to spread mulch around the trees at Sugarbottom. Approximately ninety trees were mulched that afternoon.

"It felt good to give back to the community alongside all of my friends at Sugarbottom Campground."

-Sara Farnham, '15

The making of ODIM

For the past six years now, Marion High School students have participated in an event known as One Day In May (ODIM). This event is a day of volunteering throughout the community when students and teachers alike come together to pull up their sleeves and get their hands dirty to better different locations throughout the area. A lot of people don't take into consideration that this day takes a lot of planning and preparation. Lawryn Fraley, senior, is one of the people that helps put the event together.

Fraley, and all of the other people that help put this day together, is in charge of fundraising all of the money so that everyone can have free t-shirts and free lunch, contacting the people at the locations to organize the events, and making sure the equipment is ready for the day. "My favorite part is probably helping design the pretty t-shirts and in the end getting to show off a year of hard work," Fraley commented. Though lots of students show up to help on this very important day, many don't realize the effect their harsh words can have on those involved. "Some people call the work slavery, some hate on the food, and they're more often than not complaining to our faces," Fraley explained.

While Fraley finds these antics rude and makes them feel as if their work was all for nothing, it's worth it all in the end. "I help do One Day In May because I love helping my community, and I think being able to help at places like Camp Courageous, which is where I was, is really extraordinary," Fraley stated.

Although ODIM can seem like a lot of work, Fraley endured every second in hopes that their fellow students appreciate it and come for one day of helping the community.

▲ Katie Serbousek and Nicole Hansel, both '16, clean the front windows of the building at the Winslow Nursing Home during One Day in May. The girls later went on to interact with the residents.

▲ Nathan Schmidt, '16, pushes through the last section of the four by eight Thursday night at the district track meet.

◀ Erica Kelly, '15, head butts the soccer ball forward while her teammate and Central Saber player look on. This is Kelly's fourth year on the girls' soccer team.

560 Marion High School students volunteered their time during the school sanctioned One Day in May.

May 11-15

94 A. Coleman and S. Guyer

Tweet: "Good job shuttle hurdle now lets go ham at state #statebound" @QuinnTower_2 (Deshaun Quinn, '15) 95