Everyday we consume ourselves with the technology around us. From the phone buzzing to life on the desk, to the Chromebooks we recieved upon entering Abraham Lincoln, we have become molded to living life through technology.

In the fall, we became obsessed with taking selfies with our friends at football games and homecoming. We went to Vala's Pumpkin Patch and posted our group photos from the "Big Chair" on Instagram. On Sundays, our Senior Sunday photos blew up our phones with notifications of likes and comments from our friends. We stood together and addressed the community from the safe corners of our computers, and made it known that we are the #LynxUnited.

In the winter, we snuggled by the fire and sipped on hot cocoa, while we posted our SnapChat Stories depicting our holiday traditions. We made snowmen and named them Olaf. Finally, we sent our annual winter holiday cards to family and friends from around the country. The halls around school reverberated with excitement as we anticipated the long awaited winter break.

In the spring, we were consumed with the plans of prom. With graduation around the corner, we took our last bathroom selfies and started to recieve college acceptance letters.

Throughout all this time, our teachers, parents, and sometimes friends, have told us to get off our phones, and pay attention in class. They warned us to ponder before we post and taught us how to use technology to the fullest. We used our cell phones in class to post pictures of our latest class projects.

"Life is like a camera. Just focus on what's important, capture the good times, develop from the negatives, and if things don't turn out-take another shot."

Instead of looking at life from behind the lens to only view these images to remember our past, we will finish this year living in the moment and looking at . . .
