Johnson Brothers

From classical to rock 'n' roll, Sam and Isaac Johnson have embraced the stage and deepened their love for music.

The twin brothers have enjoyed playing music together since they were young boys.

"I started learning to play the guitar at the age of nine," Isaac said. "Slash from Guns N' Roses has been a great role model for me."

The Johnsons really got involved in music when they turned 12 years old with help from their dad, Mike Johnson, who used to play in a band of his own.

"Most of the time we played in our basement," Sam said. "Our parents would tell us to turn the music down because we weren't very good."

After years of rehearsal, the Johnsons formed a group consisting of Brent Downs (11), Sage Sutter (12), and Cooper Corcoran (10).

"It was originally Brent, Isaac, and I," Sam said. "At first we would just mess around on the instruments. Eventually, we became good and really started playing."

The brothers gained community recognition performing at various events like Friday at Five, Open Mic Night, as well as birthday and graduation parties.

"One memorable moment we have is performing at the Delaware County Fair," Isaac said. "Sam interrupted my solo when we were playing, which almost threw me off kilter, but we played it off really well."

Individually, Sam preformed at the Little Hawk Wrestling Camp at Bailey's Ford while Isaac has performed the national anthem at various sporting events.

While performing, Sam and Isaac feed off of each other's enthusiasm, and it shows in their performances.

"At school I am more shy than on stage," Isaac said. "On stage, I am more energetic and not worried about what I act like."

According to Sam, "Isaac doesn't have to talk-his guitar does it for him."
