TERM

As the construction blueprints began to be put away, the weather started getting colder. During B Term, Blue Devils showed their spirit by cheering like a Marshall Maniac in George Marshall Gym for the basketball team. The wrestlers spent almost all of their free time on the mat. The boys swim team perfected their strokes, still awaiting the new pool. Students pushed themselves through the cold winds of winter as they waited for Thanksgiving and Christmas break. Always on the move even in the cold weather, students followed their own blue prints into the New Year. (I. Kern)

1. All Shook Up At a ceremony in November, the girls swim team recognizes state qualifiers. Every member felt the excitement when Allison Fellner (19), Alexis Cummins (18), Maria Eure (18), Meredith Cox (17) and Isabelle Shook (19) were called forward. "It was probably one of the best feelings ever. I got really excited," said Shook. (A. Lance)

1. Light the Candles At the North High School auditorium, Central's National Honor Society inducts 46 new members. Inductees lighted candles and wore traditional robes as current members and other guests gave speeches. "It was quite an interesting experience and the outfits were a bit goofy. The mayor gave a good speech about the dash between someone's life," said Jayson Taylor (18). (J. Jurgens)

2. All In Varsity basketball players huddle up to get hyped before their game. Team unity served as an important aspect for the boys' success. "We chant 'We ready!' before every game," said Manny Mack (17). (J. Jurgens)

3. Watch Out! During the DC Leadership Holiday Dinner Box volleyball game, Treshawn Milton (17) watches as Mr. Trujillo sends the ball over the net. Students beat the staff 20-19 in the intense buzzer-beater game for this charity event. "It was fun and competitive. I wish it went longer. I think we should do it more often to raise money for other fundraisers," Milton said. (G. Fredenburg)
