→ FULL-TUITION SCHOLARSHIPS

New this year! Full-tuition scholarships are available for underrepresented communities. Application deadline: June 15.

The Iowa Summer Journalism Workshop is a Sunday – Thursday residential summer camp for high school students, grades 9 (fall 2023) to 12, including graduating seniors (spring 2023). Live in a residence hall on the University of Iowa campus, make new friends, and enjoy amazing experiences! Choose from one of the sessions below to hone your skills and work with a pro!

Investigative Reporting

During this hands-on workshop, student journalists will learn how to dig deeper into news stories through public records, credible online sources, and interviews.

You'll work with award-winning investigative journalist Erin Jordan. Together, we'll talk with experts, practice basic computer-assisted reporting (with prizes!), and develop story ideas to hit the ground running when the new school year begins. Experience the intersection of data, human interest, and public impact!

Photo Journalism

Do you want to build your photography skills and develop your photographic eye? During this camp you will keep your camera with you and document all you see. Join photographer Miranda Meyer to explore Iowa City's downtown and check out the county fair. We'll share our photographs, give each other constructive feedback, and develop our skills and techniques. By the end of this course, you'll be a more confident photographer and a closer observer of your surroundings.

Publication Leadership

Whether it's online news, a newspaper, or a yearbook, it all starts with leadership - the individual or team in charge of the publication's editorial direction. Through this workshop, students will work with award-winning journalist Maudlyne Ihejirika to develop key transferable skills such as accountability, flexibility, creativity, and communication, working cooperatively to re-imagine a current news publication. Learn what success looks like through decision-making, role playing, making mistakes, resolving errors, and hearing from journalism industry titans.

Advanced Graphic Design

Take the next step in using Adobe Photoshop, InDesign, and other useful online design tools. Patrick Johnson will lead you through hands-on experiences with cutting-edge technology and design theory. Bring content from your publications to be repackaged into stunning, relevant, contemporary designs. We'll study modern design, font, color theory, and design software. The goal is to return to school with design ideas to put into place on your publications in the coming year.

Yearbook

Create a yearbook students will be glad to own and staff will be excited to produce. JoAnn Gage will help you focus on developing your book's concept through verbal and visual elements and planning coverage strategies. Be organized by day 1 after this hands-on workshop. Signing up in pairs will benefit your team.

Personal Writing

Let's be honest. What's more fun to write: an eight-paragraph news story about the German club's field trip or 600 words that flow from your soul? Four hundred words about this year's homecoming theme or your take on Tarantino's latest movie? Don't just write. Express yourself and have fun. Jarrin Williams will help you gain the tools you need to stand out, find your voice, and return to your publication as the writer everyone is talking about!
