The year began with each student becoming the owner of a 7" Macbook Air. The 1:1 laptop program offered an innovative tool for students. Equipped for the world of education through technology, students and staff elevated learning to a new level.

"The laptops were great because they allowed us to utilize the internet for class and also share Google Docs on the spot so we could all collaborate as one," said freshman Aimee Dieleman.

Triumphs were made as individuals, and celebrated as one.

"Sam Van Maanen [senior Aaron and freshman Ryan's father] got all of us shirts, and we went up to Des Moines to watch senior Savannah Stralow bowl. It was a very cool experience. She had the biggest cheering section there, and she was just absolutely delighted. Savannah somewhat coined the mantra, 'Like a family' for the day, and that seemed to play out pretty well. It was just cool to be able to bless Savannah in that way," said senior Nathan Clayberg.

Students encouraged each other in every day activities to achieve success.

1 For All

"The relationships were funny, caring and trustworthy because I knew I could always count on my friends," said junior Eleanor Witt.

The year was destined to be different from the beginning. Students were determined to make it the best as they united All for One and One for All.

OPENING→3

⤴Students cheer the girls' basketball team to victory against Carlisle at home Dec. 6. "Having a great crowd behind you is always important, but cheering for the players was the best part. The energy was high because the game was really close," said junior Brooke Darnell.
