Living for the Moment

Everything good must eventually come to an end, every thing loved in life must eventually die out, and every moment must eventually become a memory.

Quinn Cannoy, senior, experienced this end to something he loved on senior night. Although it wasn't his last game, it was still the last time wearing that red jersey on the home field. He loves many things about high school football, but some he will miss more than others, "I will miss the team aspect and the brotherhood that you form with the team." These things mean a lot to Cannoy and to all the other seniors who were a part of the camaraderie, but senior night is more than just a farewell.

Senior night may seem like it is only to say goodbye to the beloved seniors, but that is only partially true. Head coach, Mr. Tony Perkins, likes senior night for two reasons, "It gives you a chance to say goodbye to all of the seniors, and it also gives you a chance to thank the parents for all that they have done." Football is more than just eleven guys on the field. It is coaches, it is fans, and it is family.

So as good things end, and the things closest to the heart fade away, make the moments into memories, because once those fragments, those small pieces of life are gone, they will never come back.
