

glimpse

n. [glimps]
a very brief, passing look, sight or view; a momentary or slight appearance;
a vague idea or inkling.

In a way, all we are is a glimpse.

Johnston, as a school district, has been around for

100
years

but only slivers of that century are evident to us.

Years from now, we will look back on our time here in glimpses.

The games that gave us energy.
The performances that twinkled with drama and sparkles .
The friends that kindled laughter.
The all-nighters that left us with more drowsiness than productivity.
The selfies and the studying, the tail-gates and the trends, the assemblies and the ambassadors, the practices and the projects that all encompass our time here, will soon be just memories.

9 Job # 3292 S

Here is the cornfield that we got so use to passing by on our way in and out of school everyday that created a buffer zone between us an Pioneer. It also may (or may not) have served as a summer job location, a hiding spot from the police during TP-ing, and a hog of perfectly good space to be used for more parking spots.
