If you really knew Sarah Boettcher...

I started reading tarot cards a little over a year ago, after my mom went to a class about them.

Tarot cards are cards used for fortune telling and they're made up of the major arcana and minor arcana. The minor are like playing card decks with cards numbered two through ten, and then ace, knight, king, and queen. Minor also has four suits named swords, cups, wands, and pentacles with their own meanings, like emotions or actions.

Sometimes when I read people's cards they only get one suit. It's really interesting when people get certain cards over and over again even after I shuffle and spread out the cards in different places.

There was one time when I was reading my own cards and in the spread I only got swords cards and a few reoccurring major marcana.

There are spreads for basically anything: love, future, past, obstacles, family matters, etc.

It's also cool to do a spread, write down the results, and then do it again a month later and see how the results from the time before compare, especially if it's a spread about the future to see just how right the cards were.
