Caring for Children

Some people can't stand being around kids, and some people love them so much that they want to have a career involving children for their entire life. Alaysia Pursell '17 is someone who loves kids. "Ever since I was little, kids and little nannies tend to gravitate towards me I guess and I love babysitting and kids," said Pursell. Pursell spends a lot of time around kids; she babysits her own siblings, family friend's children, and neighbor's children. "Sometimes people will see me babysitting kids and I take them to the park and stuff and people will ask me when I'm available and I'll give them my phone number." She has been babysitting since she was 13, and is 15 now. "Kids give off a warm and cozy vibe so it just makes me feel better, like if I'm sad I go around to children and they make you feel better because they're so full of life and they don't know anything that's bad," she described. Pursell wants to be a Neo Natal nurse, who are nurses that work with newborn babies.
